

CRITIQUING RELIGION: DISCOURSE, CULTURE, POWER

SERIES EDITOR

Craig Martin, St. Thomas Aquinas College, USA cmartin@stac.edu

Critiquing Religion: Discourse, Culture, Power publishes works that historicize both religions and modern discourses on 'religion' that treat it as a unique object of study. Using diverse methodologies and social theories, volumes in this series view religions and discourses on religion as commonplace rhetorics, authenticity narratives, or legitimating myths which function in the creation, maintenance, and contestation of social formations. Works in the series are on the cutting edge of critical scholarship, regarding 'religion' as just another cultural tool used to gerrymander social space and distribute power relations in the modern world. Critiquing Religion: Discourse, Culture, Power provides a unique home for reflexive, critical work in the field of religious studies.

EDITORIAL BOARD

- ◇ Richard King, Professor of Buddhist and Asian Studies, Head of the Department of Religious Studies, University of Kent, UK
- ◇ Bruce Lincoln, Caroline E. Haskell Distinguished Service Professor of the History of Religions in the Divinity School, University of Chicago, USA. Associate Faculty in the Departments of Anthropology and Classics.
- ◇ K. Merinda Simmons, Associate Professor of Religious Studies, University of Alabama, USA
- ◇ Leslie Dorrough Smith, Assistant Professor of Religious Studies, Avila University, USA
- ◇ Hugh Urban, Professor of Comparative Studies, Ohio State University, USA

CONFIRMED VOLUMES SO FAR

Title	Author/Editor	Publication Year
Stereotypes about Religion	Brad Stoddard and Craig Martin	2017